

Autumn Domingo is a fourteen-year-old from Staten Island, NY. She attended the 2018 Tools & Tiaras Summer Camp and absolutely loved the experience. Through the various hands-on activities, she discovered an interest in carpentry, interior design, and architecture. Even though she is unsure of what career choice she wants to pursue, she believes the skills she learned at camp will serve her well in whatever field of work she chooses.

Before attending camp, Autumn knew little about the trades and how many women were breaking down barriers in male-dominated professions. Once she was able to get a peek into this new world, she understood that females had to work twice as hard to prove that they could do so much more than just cook, clean and take care of children. These women had to have a lot of courage, effort, and passion to overcome these challenges. They inspired her to take action in helping to empower and encourage young girls to go after what they want.

She is very thankful for the opportunity to serve on this youth advisory board and is excited to contribute to this wonderful organization.
