

Sinade Wadsworth is a trailblazer in the construction industry, whose journey began at Nontraditional Employment for Women (NEW). Starting as a graduate, Sinade graduated from her apprenticeship and two years later became the youngest Council Representative hired at the New York City District Council of Carpenters in her previous role as a union organizer. Sinade has garnered widespread recognition in the construction industry for her active involvement with developers, general contractors, elected officials, and community-based organizations at the municipal, state, and federal levels. Passionately advocating for women in the trades, Sinade collaborates with various government agencies to champion gender equity and drive workforce diversity. Previously serving as Eastern District Chair for the United Brotherhood of Carpenters & Joiners of America, she led the Sisters in the Brotherhood initiative across twelve states, advocating internationally for female carpenters. Her impact continued as the former Construction Commission Co-Chair for the NYC Department of Education's CTE program, promoting Career & Technical Education and apprenticeship opportunities for students aspiring to join the trades.

Sinade also has a strong civic involvement background, having served as a Bronx Democratic Party County Committee member for the 87th Assembly District and as a board member for Bronx Community Board 9. Her commitment to mentorship and advocacy has earned her recognition as a transformative leader in construction and beyond. Currently serving as a Liaison Officer for a UK Investment Corporation.

Sinade leverages her expertise to foster international partnerships. She also serves on multiple nonprofit boards such as the Association of Medical Facility Professionals of Greater New York as the Diversity, Equity & Inclusion Director in addition to her roles with NEW, Rhode Island Women In The Trades, and Bobcat -Borough of Brooklyn Center for Arts & Technology. Sinade's guiding motto, "Take the risk or lose the chance."
